DETAILED ACTION

1. This application has been examined.
2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.
3. Claims 1-27, 29-31 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Sheldon et al (6072486) and Klingler et al (5404316).
4. Regarding claim 1, Sheldon et al show the method for displaying icons within a data processing system (Figure 7 for example), which: determines a quantity of a plurality of icons to be displayed on a display screen (column 2 lines 30-42 and 49-66, column 6 lines 43-55), determines a designated area on the screen for displaying the icons (column 2 lines 49-66, Figure 6, column 15 lines 29-42, column 16 lines 4-19, column 18 lines 19-35), scales the icons such that the icons are displayed in the designated area (column 18 lines 29-36, Figure 2). Sheldon et al do not specifically go into the details of the scaling being automatic per se based on the number of icons, but do mention scaling the icons and fitting them to the designated area. Furthermore, Klingler et al do show automatically scaling image clips based on number of clips, to fit them to a designated area (see Klingler et al Figures 3, 4, 6, 17, column 3 lines 20-45, column 5 lines 30-60, column 8 lines 13-45). It would have been obvious to a person with ordinary skill in the art to automatically scale the icons in Sheldon et al based on the number of icons, because it would be a convenient way to fit the icons to the designated area.

5. Regarding claim 2, the vector graphic (text based) icon quantity may be determined (Sheldon et al Figures 6, 8A-E, column 16 lines 24-40.)
6. Regarding claim 3, the bitmap graphic icons quantity may be determined (Sheldon et al Figure 10C, column 17 lines 45-55).
7. Regarding claim 4, the icons are displayed on the screen (Sheldon et al Figure 10C for example).
8. Regarding claim 5, the icons include graphic and text images (Sheldon et al Figure 7 for example).
9. Regarding claim 6, the icons may only be text (Sheldon et al Figure 6, 8A-E for example).

Art Unit: 2174

10. Regarding claim 7, the screen has a fixed pixel width and height (standard monitor, Sheldon et al column 6 lines 8-15)
11. Claims 8-14, 15-21, show the same features as 1-7 respectively and are rejected for the same reasons.
12. Claims 22 and 25 and 29 show the same features as claim 1 and is rejected for the same reasons.
13. Regarding claims 23-24, 26-27, 30-31, in addition to that mentioned for claim 1, note again the minimum and maximum size choices for the icon determined by user input (Sheldon et al column 18 lines 29-36).
14. Claims 28 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Sheldon et al (6072486) and Klingler et al (5404316) and Bodnar et al (6310634).
15. Regarding claim 28, neither Sheldon et al nor Klingler et al specifically show the handheld device, but Sheldon et al show an interface for fitting icons to a designated area. This is particular applied in many handheld devices (see Bodnar et al column 13 lines 10-45, Figures 3, 4G for example). It would have been obvious to a person with ordinary skill in the art to have this as an output interface in Sheldon et al, because it would provide a convenient output device for an apparatus that fits icons to a designated area.

16. Applicant's arguments with respect to the claims have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
